Speeches Made In Which Co-Opertion is Promised Firefighters In Their Movement.

A ladies' auxiliary will be formed by Motor Fire Company No. 5. Announcement to this effect was made last night at the first reception and banquet given at that company's house on N rth Patrick street, to the wives and lady friends of the company by Toastmaster Thomas Chauncey. Mr. Chauncey in calling the gathering to order at the conclusion of the banquet, stated that he had been requested to make this announcement and that the members of the company sought the co-operation of the ladies. He explained that they propose to use the assembly room for dancing and other entertainments. The speaker also paid a tribute to the work done by the firemen. The banquet was opened with invocation by Rev. Dr. Browne.

The first speaker was Rev. Dr. Robert Browne, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church. Dr. Browne told his hearers that he had a warm spot in his heart for the residents gv od mod om dom do modmd modoh of Alexandria and for their hospitality.

The firemen he declared inspired a man more than anything else. Their watchword he said is duty. Dr. Browne recalled the firemen of Alexandria capturing the first prize at the last state convention and declared that the hearts of the citizens of Alexandria are open to the firemen, and he expressed hope that the men would work tehir way into the hearts of the citizens so that they would not have to ask for anything. Continuing said he, "There is not a man here who would not be willing to make the supreme sacrifice if need be. He praised Company No. 5 and declared it reflects great credit on those in charge.

William Desmond, chairman of the fire committee of the city council, on behalf of the fire committee, promised assistance to the company in procuring pictures for the walls of their assembly room and assured the firemen that the committee would be only too glad to aid them in any manner whatsoever. The fire committee he declared is behind the fire companies,.

Norman Roberts, president of Columbia Company No. 4, said the Columbia Company was willing to assist Company No. 5 in anything they undertake for the company's advancement and on behalf of Company 4 he expressed pleasure at being present.

Former Mayor F. J. Paff recalled the early days of the fire department and expressed gratificaton at being a member of Company No. 5. For eight years he said he was chief executive of the city and he felt justly proud of the fire department. Mr. Paff said he was only too glad to give what aid he could to this company.

Mrs. T. Clifton Howard made a short address in which she among other things said her heart was with the fire department and assured the firemen that anything she could do to help them she would be only too glad to do and she complimented the firemen on forming an auxiliary.

The assemblage was dismissed by Norman Roberts.

At the conclusion of Mr. Roberts' address the toastmaster took occasion to eulogize Mrs. William Simpson because all of her sons were members of the fire department.

During the progress of the banquet the occasion was enlivened with music furnished by the company's own orchestra.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Washington, Nov. 2.—During his visit to Washington on Monday, E. Lee Trinkle, who is to be the next Governor of Virginia, took occasion to call upon Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the former president. When the present Mrs. Wilson was a school girl in Virginia, she and the Democratic candidate for Governor, were warm, personal friends. Mr. Trinkle, therefore, thought it would be only an act of courtesy to pay his respects to his long-time friend and acquaintance and he journeyed to the Wilson home on S St. Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Trinkle spent a few moments chatting about the old days and talking about many of the good times they had had together, recalling some of the old acquaintances both had known before either had ever come into public light. Mrs. Wilson expressed her great pleasure at renewing the acquaintance of her old chum and Mr. Trinkle declared he never spent a more profitable few minutes in all his life. Under the advice of his physician, the former President was not able to greet the Democratic Gubernatorial candidate but sent his warmest regards and best wishes for success through his wife.

As a result of repeated demonstrations against American diplomatic and consular officers abroad by communists seeking the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, who are under sentence of death at Braintree, Mass., for murder, the Department of Justice is keeping under close surveillance communist leaders in this country. William J. Burns, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department has taken personal charge of an investigation of communistic activities in an effort to prevent any kind of a demonstration here and to thwart possible attempts to assassinate American officials or foreign delegates who will attend the conference on the limitation of armaments.

The President, of course, has a capable bodyguard and the utmost precautions are always taken to prevent his exposure to possible danger. This work is in charge of the Secret Service but under the law, the Secret Service cannot supervise the guarding of other officials. As a result, the Department of Justice has offered to lend any number of operatives to the State Department in frustrating a possible plot of American communists.

It is expected that the question of giving a bonus to the men who fought in the World War will be one of the principal issues in the next Congressional campaign. Senator Reed, of Missouri, put the Republicans on the run when he proposed that the soldier bonus should be paid through continuation of the excess profit tax. Senator Simmons, of North Carolina is now ready to propose that the soldier bonus be paid out of the interest to be received from the foreign debt. On the railroad refunding bill, the Democrats are preparing to charge that the Republicans were quite willing to pay money to the railroads but exceedingly unwilling to pay bonuses to the defenders of the nation.

The names of four Democrats of prominence appear in the list of the membership which is to comprise the advisory committee of the conference on the limitation of armaments. Governor John M. Parker, hails from Louisiana, and although he has held Progressive ideas from time to time, along with those of the late President Roosevelt, he is once more back in the Democratic fold. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has always been classed as a Democrat and during the last Wilson campaign advised all his followers to vote the Democratic ticket. Willard Saulsbury is a former Democratic Senator from Delaware, while Charles S. Barrett, who hails from Georgia, is president of the Farmers' Union. Naturally, a vast majority of the members of this advisory committee are members of the party in power.

In response to recent inquiries concerning the probable sale of steel vessels belonging to the Shipping Board arrangements are being made by the trustees of the Fleet Corporation to advertise in the next few days ten or twelve of the freight vessels of 10,000 ton types. Included in the lot will be four hulls built in China. These vessels will be chosen from the pick of the fleet and if offers are at all reasonable there is little doubt that the sale will be made. Before they go on the market the ships will be appraised by the American Bureau of Shipping. The sale will be by private, competitive bids.

PRIEST VICTIM OF ASSAULT BY BURGLAR

Rev Louis Smet, Pastor of St. Mary's Church, Finds Burglar In Room

MAKES PLUCKY FIGHT

Struck in Head Three Times By Intruder During Scuffle — Robber Gets Gold Watch and Cash.

Rev. Louis Smet, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, 310 Duke street, was the victim of a brutal assault at 4:10 o'clock this morning at the hands of a burglar he found in his room. He was beaten over the head with a blunt instrument three times and suffered greatly from loss of blood.

Father Smet was aroused from his slumbers by the noise made by the intruder and he found the burglar in his room going through bureau drawers. Father Smet at once sprang out of his bed and grabbed the burglar. The burglar fought desperately to cause the priest to relinquish his hold. Father Smet, however, succeeded in throwing the burglar across the bed. In an instant the man got up and there was a struggle again between the intruder and priest and it was in this struggle that Father Smet was struck over the head three times.

Immediately after doing this, the burglar fled from the room, which is the front bed room, and is located on the second floor of the parsonage. The burglar made but little noise in leaving the place, and made his exit through the front door.

The noise of the struggle aroused Rev. L. F. Kelly and Michael Malloy, assistant pastors, and they soon came to Father Smet's aid.

Dr. M. D. Delaney was summoned and rendered medical assistance. The police were at once notified by Father Kelly and Police Sergt. Wilkinson and a squad of policemen soon were at the rectory and after obtaining a description of the burglar, started out in search of him.

The police had utrned over to them two valuable clews. One is a brown fedora hat size 6 3-4 made by Stetson and bearing the name of the dealer, Haskell and Jones Company, Portland, Maine. In additon the police have a small but powerful flashlight. It was in his struggle with Father Smet that the burglar dropped his hat and flashlight and in his haste to escape he left both.

The burglar was in search of money. He rifled the pockets of the trousers of Father Smet and obtained a small amount of money, probably not more than three or four dollars, according to Father Kelly, also a gold watch.

A subsequent investigation of the premises revealed that the entire down stairs and other rooms on the second floor had been ransacked by the burglar. The drawers of the desk in the office on the first floor had been opened. Nothing of value, however, was in them and the burglar next went into the library and rifled the drawers of the desk therein. This is located on the second floor of the rectory.

Entrance to the parsonage was made through a rear window. The burglar evidentally came in through the Royal street side, which is the side entrance to the north wing of the church and also the entrance to the rear of the parsonage. A back window, which was unlocked, was raised by the burglar, making entrance very easy.

Chief of Police Goods and members of the police department later in the day interviewed Father Smet and obtained a fairly good description of the burglar, who is described as being short and stockily built. A short time afterward a foreigner, who claims he came here from West Virginia in search of work, was taken in custody by the police. He, however, does not bear a resemblance to the man wanted. This man says he is a native of Austria.

Since the burglary was reported the police have practically combed the entire surrounding country in search of the man. The police are of the opinion that the man had a confederate.

Several strangers who have acted suspiciously have been in the city recently and the police are keeping a close watch over them.

Today finger print experts from the Washington police department came here and took impressions of the room where the burglar was, and also of the window by which he made his exit.

At noon today it was stated that the condition of Father Smet was most favorable, although he suffered considerably from loss of blood and is nervous from the shock.

News of the burglary and assault soon spread through the city and during the day there were many callers at the rectory to inquire of the condition of the priest who put up such a plucky fight with the burglar.

CASE DISMISSED

J. F. Thompson Can Proceed With Erection of Frame Building

The case of James F. Thompson who had been stopped from erecting a frame building at the head of King street, known as 1802 King street, was dismissed in the police court this morning and he will proceed with his work. Magistrate Aylett B. Nicol presided.

Corporation Attorney H. Noel Garner appeared for the city and explained to the court that the mayor had stopped its erection owing to the character of the building being at the entrance of the city.

Mr. Garner, however, stated that Mr. Thompson had obtained the necessary permit for its construction.

Mayor Duncan stated that people had complained to him and protested against its erection in that section. The mayor, however, said that he did not desire to stop any business, but simply ordered its construction stopped in order that city council might have some say in the matter.

Attorney F. G. Duvall appeared for Mr. Thompson and said he understood that he had been criticized for taking the case. He, however, said that he simply gave his honest opinion to his clent and nothing more.

The sermon was preached by Rev. J. J. Clarke, pastor of Cascade, Va., M. E. Church South. The sermon was powerful and spiritual and brought home to the people the importance of putting the Kingdom of God first in one's life. The public is cordially invited. Dr. Martin will preach tonight.

ENGLAND WILL REDUCE NAVY IS PLEDGE

Lord Lee, of Fareham, Says Limit Is Safety of British Empire

DELEGATES ARRIVE

Senator Schanzer, Italian Representative Regards Conference as Guarantee of Peace.

New York, Nov. 1.—British delegates to the Conference on Limitation of Armaments, will go to Washington resolved, that, short of compromising the safety of the empire or its sea security, they will go to almost any length to meet other great naval powers in a mutual and proportionate effort to relieve their people from the burden of competitive armament.

This declaration was made today by Lord Lee of Fareham, First Lord of the British Admiralty, and one of the official delegates of his country, who arrived on the Olympic with other delegates to the Conference from Italy, China and Japan.

Referring to the World War, Lord Lee said he had been convinced for years that Germany meant mischief, and added that lessons learned from that war were not confined to those learned from German.

"The world," he asserted in a prepared statement, "has learned a wider lesson stil that mialitarism wherever situated and however entrenched, is a menace to civilization and must be given notice to quit.

"That is what brings us to Washington, and if, as I trust, we all go there in a spirit not merely of hope and sincerity, but of fixed determination to convert the President's lofty aspiration into a practical working agreement, the war will not have been fought in vain.

"So far as I am concerned, and here I speak not only as the responsible head of the British Admiralty but as one of the official delegates, I come in the spirit of quiet confidence that the results of this Conference will be such as amply to justify President Harding's far seeing initative, and, personally, I am not prepared even to contemplate the possibilities of failure. To do so would be to assume that the world was afflicted with an incurable insanity and could not be restrained from suicide.

"The greatest needs of mankind today and for the future, are peace and relief from the burdens of war which peace ought to bring. No one recognizes that more clearly and fully than the British Government and people, and none has given greater proofs of sincerety in the pursuit of these high objects. By their bold and, so far lonely lead in reduction of naval armaments; by their frank acceptance of the principal of equality with America in the matter of naval strength, as also by their present policy of conciliation and concession in Ireland, they have made it clear to the world that they not only seek peace but ensue it.

"It is the same spirit of practical endeavor that the British delegates come to Washington, resolved that—short of compromising the safety of the empire or sea—security upon which its very existence depends, a betrayal of our ancient heritage of which they could never be guilty—they will go to almost any length to meet the other great naval powers in a mutual and proportionate effort to relieve our respective peoples from the intolerable burdens of competitive armaments."

Friendship Veteran Fire Association

The Friendship Veteran Fire Association is probably one of the oldest organizations of "smoke-eaters" in the entire country. Founded in 1774 it has played a prominent part in the life and development of the city, and is still doing yeoman service along progressive lines. The old equipment of the original company is housed on South Alfred Street, a short half block from King. An ancient hose cart built by R. F. Prettyman, of Alexandria, over one hundred years ago occupies a place of honor alongside the first fire engine which ever came to the city. This engine, worked by man power, was the marvel of its day. It was built in Philadelphia in 1800 for the United States Government and afterward purchased by the Association. A hat worn by the firefighters of colonial days occupies a prominent place on the wall, together with some of the fire buckets, used before the fire engine had been developed. The hat is of the stove-pipe variety, made of metal and painted a vivid green. Draped along the wall is a United States flag bearing the thirteen stars on a blue field, the official standard of our country in the years of her youth.

STATE NEWS

Chincoteague,—An island where no body is poor, where poverty is unknown, less than 300 miles from Philadelphia. It is not a multi-millionaire's shooting lodge, or the happy hunting grounds, or what is called the happy hunting-ground, or the "exclusive" club. It is a few thousand acres of sand, producing little except wild ponies and salt grass garden vegetables. There is not sufficient food raised on the island to feed a tenth of the inhabitants. They number about 4,000 in all. The island where nobody is poor is called Chincoteague. It hugs the eastern shore of Virginia in the county of Accomac, and is protected from the surges of the Atlantic by the narrow peninsula of Assateague, dropped like a plumb line southward about 70 miles from the southeast corner of Delaware.

Richmond—With 10 days intervening before the election of state officers and members of the House of Delegates there has come to the front a sharp exchange between Col. Henry W. Anderson the lily white Republican candidate, and Senator E. Lee Trinkle, the Democratic candidate for governor. The whole thing hinges on the injection of the negro question into the campaign, which, according to Colonel Anderson, is a thing of the past, a bugaboo, and that the negro is no longer a factor in the politics of the state. Colonel Anderson seeks to have the colored election judges in Charlottesville, named by the electoral board, removed, and their places given to white Republicans. Colonel Anderson asks that Senator Trinkle use his influence in that direction.

Richmond—Dr. R. H. Brockwell and C. B. Norrell, of this city, figured in an accident Thursday when an automobile in which they were going to Charles City county on a sora hunting trip was wrecked as the result of striking a buck deer at Curle's Neck farm. The deer leaped from the hedge on the roadside and was struck by the car which skidded and was wrecked, both rear wheels being demolished. The animal escaped, a dog later trailing it to James River, across which the frightened buck quickly swam. The hunters escaped injury. "Dick" Atkinson was called upon in an effort to run down the deer. He put his dog on the trail, but the chase proved of no avail, as considerable time had been lost before pursuit was begun.

Roanoke—The Industrial Employment Bulletin, issued by the department of labor, copies of which were received here Friday, states that the employment of this city is almost confined entirely to railroad labor, among the ranks of which, reports show that approximately 2,500 men were idle. With the exception of Norfolk and Portsmouth, labor conditions in Virginia are not discouraging the report states. The bulletin added that employment in Virginia is confined to railroad shops, navy yards, iron, steel, and coal workers.

Norfolk—A near riot by 100 carpenters working on the Western Junior High School, Spottswood and Shirley Avenues, occurred yesterday when the paymaster of a subcontracting firm failed to put in his appearance at the expected time to pay off the men. A half dozen police officers were rushed to the scene in the patrol wagon in answer to the riot call put in by the superintendent of the general contracting firm, who meanwhile guarded the property with a revolver. The carpenters dispersed quietly, however, on receipt of assurances that they be paid in full Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Warsaw—The small-pox epidemic which has been raging in Montross District, Westmoreland county, continues. Until a few days ago the epidemic was confined to this district, but recent cases have been discovered in Richmond County. Dr. Roy T. Flannagan, of the State Health Board, on a recent trip to this section, declared the epidemic to be smallpox. Until that time there was some differences of opinion among local physicians as to whether the disease was genuine smallpox.

Norfolk—Norfolk has a colored Ku Klux Klan. It is made up of women. And whoever they make up their minds to get they get. Norfolk's plain clothes men can testify to that. The Klan promised two of the detectives yesterday they would "turn up" a woman the police were looking for and they kept their promise. The woman was landed. And enough brick bats to build a small sized house figured in the capture.

Farmville—Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, has consented to address the second rural life conference in Farmville, November 3-6. An outstanding leader in co-operative marketing, Mr. Poe has perhaps done more than any other one man to improve rural conditions in the South.

Danville—The Democratic organizatons of the Fifth District of Virginia plan a whirlwind finish of the campaign starting tomorrow. Speakers will appear every day in all sections of the district, and J. M. Hooker, candidate for Congress, will speak twice and sometimes three times a day until the close of the campaign.

ADVISERS TO U. S. DELEGATES NUMBER 53

President Names 21 and State Department 34 as Advisory Committee

HEADS FIRST GROUP

George Sutherland Picked—High Officers of Army and Navy On Technical Staff.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The diplomatic organization which is to represent the United States at the Conference on Limitation of Armaments was completed yesterday when the President announced the name of 21 advisory committeemen and when a few hours later the State Department made public the names of 34 members of the technical staff of the American delegation.

Of the two groups the technical staff undobutedly will be the more important. It will contribute the expert advice upon which the American delegation will act in arriving at its policies respecting both the international issues and the limitation or reduction of armaments.

Also from this staff will be drawn the committeemen who will represent the United States in the purely technical studies to be made and in the reports which are to be acted upon by the Conference as a whole. Some of the Conference committees, of ours will be composed of accredited delegates, but many others will be made up of the staff attaches of the various delegations.

The advisory committeemen will be called into consultation by the American delegation from time to time for a discussion of American policies. President Harding explained today, and their judgment is expected to be exceedingly helpful to the delegates. It is not likely however, that these men and women will have any immediate official contact with the foreign groups.

In selecting the technical staff three groups were formed, the first made up of international lawyers and international experts, many of them being in the diplomatic service or in the Department of State, the latter including 12 officials, headed by John V. MacMunay, chief of the Far Eastern division. The other two groups were from the army and navy. Major General James G. Harbord, deputy chief of staff under General Pershing, heads the list of eight army officers, while Admiral Robert E. Coontz, chief of operations, is at the head of the navy representatives.

The President explained that he did not recognize any special element of the population of the country in selecting the Advisory Committee, but had sought to include representatives of the various geographical sections of the country. Also he deliberately selected three Democrats for membership on the committee, most of the others being Republican

The advisory committee will be headed by former Senator George Sutherland, of Utah, one of the President's warmest friends. The vice-chairman probably will be Secretary Hoover. General Pershing was placed on this list instead of on the technical staff, as was Admiral W. L. Rodgers, in order that the advisory committee might have the benefit of the best military and naval advice in its own deliberations.

BAPTIST REVIVAL

Woodlawn Church To Hold Services Next Week

Revival services will begin at Woodlawn Baptist Church Sunday, November 6th, at 3 p. m. The rest of the week and on Sunday, the 13th, the preaching service will be at 7:30 p. m.

Prayer meeting and song service will begin half an hour before each reaching hour.

Both for the preaching service and the leaders of the music, this revival will be conducted by men who are foremost in ability among Baptists. No more eloquent or powerful praeching could be enjoyed at a revial service in any of the big city churches. In fact the preacher will be one of Washington's foremost and most successful pastors.

The song leaders, also from Washington, have few equals and no surpervisors.

The Woodlawn Baptist Church, the small church with a big purpose, and a bigger wallop in fighting iniquty, is located on the Camp Humphreys, Alexandria Pike, not over three hundred yards from Post Four entrance to camp.

Announcement of schedules of free bus service to and from the revival meeting will be made later.

TODAY'S THOUGHT I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know no way of judging the future but by the past. Patrick Henry.

ALEXANDRIA RED CROSS.

The public-spirited men and women who are at the head of the Aleexandria Chapter of the American Red Cross are about to inaugurate a drive for funds. There is no agency in the wide world today doing more Christ-like work than this noble institution, and we trust our citizens will respond generously. The joyous season of gifts and good cheer is approaching, and we should all remember that there are whole peoples and countries still in the grim shadow of tragedy. Food for the starving little ones, and clothing against the blasts of winter for the feeble and aged; there are the objects and the wards of the Red Cross the world over.

Heed the words of the Lord and Master of Christendom—and give—however little or however much.

ART BY THE SQUARE FOOT

Lord Leverhulme, of the English peerage, is a soap-boiler by trade and a gentleman by patent. The former is his vocation and the latter his avocation. Now, art is scarcely ever an ingredient of a soap-vat. So when my lord, in his leisure moments, bethought himself to have his portrait painted, after the fashion of noblemen, ancient and modern, he proceeded on the principles laid down by all good soap-makers. That is, he made a contract, first of all. The price was to be three thousand pounds sterling for a full-length portrait. So far, so good. But the artist, Sir William Orpen, persuaded Lord Leverhulme that a sitting-down portrait would display his lordly beauty to far better effect, and won his consent. The portrait was completed, and in due time the bill presented. But here his lordship baulked. If he were to buy grease for his soap vats, and afterwards to reduce the quantity to one-half—he would naturally only be expected to pay one-half the contract-price. The painter-man had only used half the paint that a full-length portrait would have required; his brush-arm muscles had been worked just half-time; the square feet of the surface were but half those originally contracted for: how could he, by all the rules of good soap-making, be expected to pay double what the bloody thing was worth? Half-length, half-price. Nor would he budge. Fifteen hundred pounds or nothing. So the controversy got into the papers—and for all we know, into the courts.

As we remember it, this same Lord Leverhulme got into trouble with another artist only a year or two back. And also, as we remember it, a very strange decision was rendered by the English Courts, in holding that an artist had some sort of vested right in a portrait by his brush, even though sold by him to a patron, the latter not having the right to mutilate the painting even though he had paid for it.

However, art is art and soap is soap; and, as we said, the two evidently do not mix.

Alexandria Red Cross

Some one has said that the Red Cross Home Service Workers have the fingers on the pulse of the community. It is interesting in glancing over their note books, to get a glimpse of what kind of jobs make up their days work. Besides the steady and continuous work for the ex-service men and their families, here are a few items reported in the past few months that have been done for others who have come to the Alexandria Red Cross Home Service for help. It would seem that our workers do not miss many pulse beats.

Found home for child whose father had given her to undesirable people.

Purchased elastic hose for Varicose vein.

Located family of unconscious dying man.

Provided milk for children of poor family.

Took sick man to U. S. P. H. S. hospital.

Located 40 persons to whom the U. S. Government owed money.

Clothes provided for tubercular patient.

Cared for elderly woman who came here to bury her son.

Shoes half-soled for two stranded ex-sailors.

Bought truss for woman whose husband had deserted her, and found her a suitable position.

Apprehended man who had been getting money from different organizations under false pretenses.

Arranged marriage for soldier.

Got helper to stay with three small children, while mother went to hospital for an operation, and father went to work.

Took books and towels to two young men in jail, waiting trial.

Brought home stranded wife of ill soldier.

RED CROSS IN STARVING CHINA

To help overcome conditions of acute distress in five famine stricken provinces of Northern China, where millions of persons were affected by an unprecedented shortage of food, the American Red Cross during the last fiscal year spent more than $1,200,000, $1,000,000 of which was contributed directly by National Headquarters and the remainder by various groups interested in the welfare of China.

Through the wide relief operations thus made possible it is estimated that more than 600,000 famine sufferers were saved from starvation.

WHY Should YOU Belong to the American Red Cross?
BECAUSE It Is Helping to Safe-guard American Life.

The most popular of flowers, the rose, is to be found in almost every country north of the equator.

The earth's envelope of air is now estimated to extend for 300 miles above it.

Since the beginning of the world war, it is estimated that 12,000,000 Russians have perished.

Clifford's Inn, the oldest of the nine Inns of Chancery of London, has a history dating back to 1310, at least.

Most of the so-called Panama hats are made in Ecuador. The material is called paja toquilla and comes from a palm two or three meters high.

A book containing Scriptural readings in no fewer than 543 different tongues and dialects is being printed by the British and Foreign Bible Society.

El Dorado means in Spanish "the golden" and was the name bestowed on a fabulous city believed to exist in the interior of South America. Many fruitless expeditions set out in search of it.

Some of the older houses in Holland have two doors, which are used only for marriages and deaths. By one door the bride and bridegroom enter, and through the other they are carried out when dead.

FISH, FLESH OR FOWL?

Speaking at Courtland, Southampton County, on Monday, October 17, Colonel Henry W. Anderson, republican candidate for Governor, made the amazing declaration that he was neither a Democrat nor a Republican. "I am neither a Democrat nor Republican," said he, "simply a citizen of Virginia, who desires to see a change in politcal government."

We are willing to take Colonel Anderson's statement at its face value.

It may be that Colonel Anderson is politically amphibious. That he belongs to the web-footed tribe of office seekers who are perfectly content to be classed as anything so long as thy can aspire to public preferment.

Mr. Fairfax Harrison has declared that he is not "permanently" a republican, although he has ceased "temporarily" to be a democrat. He, like Colonel Anderson, whom he is supporting, has entered into a kind of limbo of political neutrality.

The one is a railroad President the other an attorney for vested interest

But with regard to Colonel Anderson:

If Colonel Anderson is not a Republican, it is very honest in him to admit it. But if Colonel Anderson is not a Republican, why did he permit himself to be nominated a candidate for Governor before the G. O. P., state convention in Norfolk?

If Colonel Anderson is not a Republican, why did he allow his name to go before the Republican National Convention at Chicago as that of a candidate for vice president?

If Colonel Anderson is not a Republican, why did he deliver the keynote speech in the Republican State Convention which opened this campaign?

If Colonel Anderson is not a Republican, why then did he permit delegates to visit the Republican State Convention at Norfolk instructed to vote for him as the accredited nominee of the Republican party in Virgina for Governor?

If Colonel Anderson is honest with the people of Virginia in now declaring he is not a Republican, what can he said of his attitude before the Republican National and State Conventions in allowing his name to go before these bodies as a candidate for Vice President and for Governor?

We will allow Colonel Anderson to answer these inquiries.

In declaring himself to be neither a Democrat nor a Republican, Col. Anderson has placed both of these parties under obligations.

But the people of Virginia have a right to know whether Colonel Anderson is politically fish, flesh or fowl, and they will probably expect aid from the Colonel in determining this question.

Will Coordinate Efforts to Help Nation's Jobless

To Colonel Arthur Woods, former Police Commissioner of New York City and at the close of the war Assistant to the Secretary of War, charged with helping to re-establish service men in civil life, has been assigned the complex administrative task of coordinating the efforts and interchanging the ideas of the Mayors' Emergency Committees recommended throughout the country by the President's Conference on Unemployment.

President Harding described as follows the bureau of which Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce and Chairman of the Unemployment Conference, named Colonel Woods head:

"In order that there may be unity of action by all the forces which may be brought to bear, whether governmental or private, the unemployment conference is establishing an agency in Washington through which appropriate coordination can be promoted, and through which reports on progress and suggestions may be given general circulation and cooperation. I trust this agency will be supported in this endeavor."

Thirty-one Mayors' Committees were formed within four days after the President's speal.

Conference on Goverment Efficiency, A Call

To the People of Virginia:

For promoting good government in Virginia, and stimulating a wider public interest in the problems of State and local administration, it is thought desirable that a State-wide conference on government efficiency should be held this Fall.

Problems of State administration, of city and county management, of police control, of civil service regulation, of improving our primary and general election laws, and those which have to do with the economics of government in general, remain to be worked out if we are to achieve here in Virginia a really efficient government.

I have, therefore, at the request of the Virginia League of Women Voters, called a two-day conference to discuss governmental efficiency to meet at the Capitol in the Hall of the House of Delegates at Richmond at eight o'clock Monday evening, November 21, 1921, and I cordially invite and request the people of Virginia especally the women's organizations in every community to send representatives to attend and participate in this conference.

For further information concerning the conference and the arrangements which are being made, inquiries should be addressed direct to Miss May I. Moore, 601 Virginia Railway and Power Building, at Richmond.

Westmoreland Davis, Governor.

Feel Every Change of the Weather?

A Bad Back Is Usually Worse During Bad Weather.

Is your back like a barometer?
Does it foretell every change of weather?
Does every cold settle on your kidneys?
Bring aching, throbbing pains?
Does it disorder the urine?
Have you thought the kidneys may be calling for help?
Thousands recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.
Alexandria testimony proves their worth. Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. Walker Campbell, 707 Pendleton St., Alexandria, says: "I caught a cold and it settled on my kidneys. I had such pains I could hardly catch my breath sometimes. When I bent over it was hard to straighten again, the pain was so bad. My kidneys acted very irregularly, especially at night. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Duncan's Drug Store and I was entirely cured, and though that was over two years ago I have had no return of kidney trouble since."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Campbell had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

CARPENTER COULD NOT EARN A PENNY

Flat on His Back When He Began Taking Tanlac, Salem Man is Now Picture of Health.

"I certainly do praise Tanlac, and always will, for it has put me in shape to where I can work and make a living for my family," said A. J. Haislip, a well-known carpenter and a life-long resident of Salem, Va., residing at 122 Academy St., for the past thirty-eight years.

"I was flat of my back in bed when I started taking Tanlac. I couldn't earn a penny, and it looked like nothing would do me any good. My whole system seemed poisoned from indigestion, constipation and biliousness, and I hadn't been able to eat anything but a little toast for a whole month. Before I had to quit work entirely I often got up in the mornings so dizzy I could hardly stand up to get my clothes on, and I couldn't climb a ladder at all. Then I broke down completely and had to go to bed.

"One day I told my wife I wanted to try Tanlac, and see if it wouldn't give me a little appetite. Well, instead of upsetting my stomach like everything else I had tried, it commenced to help me. My appetite picked up and in a little while I was fattening like a pig. I have gained sixteen pounds in weight now, and I can't remember ever feeling any better. I owe a great deal to Tanlac, and I can't help praising it."

Tanlac is sold in Alexandria by Edgar Warfield, Jr., and by leading druggists.

WITH THE WISHING FAIRY by CORINNE

The Portuguese Man-of-War and the Vellela.

"LET'S hear about the Portuguese Man-of-War, Stella," Pimzie suggested to the Wishing Fairy. "I like its queer name."

She had been telling her Brownies about her cousin Pearl (the Fairy at the End-of-the-Sea), whose four Water Brownies are a Lobster, a Swordfish, a Horseshoe Crab and a Portuguese Man-of-War.

"It is sometimes called a 'Sea Bladder' or a 'Galley,' which is the name of an old time rowed boat."

"What does it look like?"

So Stella drew a picture of it.

"It is anywhere from half an inch to fifteen inches long," she said, "and it is a very beautiful and dainty little creature. Its body is like a small boat shaped balloon that floats on the surface of the water. It is a soft, purplish blue color and being filled only with air it is quite transparent, while all along its top is a thin crest which can be erected as a sail."

"That seems a funny kind of a body to have!" exclaimed Pimzie. "I would hate to be transparent, to have no insides and to be full of nothing but air. I don't see any sense in it, anyhow!"

"Well," Stella said, as she smiled at the little Brownie's puzzled expression, "just the same there is a great deal of sense in it; for the 'Galley's' air body sails before the breeze while beneath the water, as far down as thirty or forty feet, ever so many sensitive moving threads hang from it. This tangled, waving mass of streaming tendrils are the animal's eating body. Some of them serve as mouths, some lay eggs, while others are capable of stinging. Any living thing attacked by the Man-of-War [illegible] by the tendrils and severely burned by them. These tendrils also are very important as a rudder."

"Is all this really true?" Pimzie asked. "It seems so strange that it is hard to believe! Or are you telling us a 'make believe' story, Stella, dear?"

The Wishing Fairy burst out laughing. "You silly thing!" she cried. "Have I ever told you a 'make believe' story? Everything I tell you is always absolutely true. My dear Brownies," she added, as she looked from one to another of the four comical little faces before her, "Animal life on land is very wonderful and interesting, but sea life is so amazing that it often seems unbelievable. Ever so often," she continued, "things that look exactly like plants in the ocean depths are really animals—eating, living, breathing animals!"

MAN-OF-WAR.

The Fairy again began to draw.

"This," she explained, "is another little sea animal with a sailing body. It is called a 'Vellela.' It is a sky blue, flat, air filled float, on top of which is a triangular sail. The Vellela is quite extraordinary. In its one body there seems to be several individual creatures or parts, each one working for the rest. One of them, for instance, lays eggs while the others cannot, and one (the middle one) eats for them all, for the others are unable to."

"Another strange thing," the Fairy said, "is that the Portuguese Man-of-War is almost always sure to have a lot of Vellela constantly following it. They seem to travel together."

"Gracious!" exclaimed Lorykins, who loves to eat, "the middle one seems to have the best of it! I think I like its job best."

Who Owns The Bell Telephone System?

SOME people look upon the Bell System as a large corporation owned by a group of capitalists.

On the contrary, the stock of the Company is owned by 175,000 people. This does not include many thousands who are owners of the Company's bonds, or those who are paying for stock in installments.

More than half of these stockholders are women. The average number of shares held is 30 and no shareholder owns as much as one-half of one per cent. of the stock. More than one-third of the stockholders own five shares or less each.

These people buy this stock because they believe in the efficiency of the organization and the integrity of its management. They believe their money is safe and they expect to receive a continuous dividend on their investment.

The further extension of our system is dependent upon these people and others who may be attracted as investors. If we are going to continue to meet the growing demands for extension of our service, it is imperative that these people shall continue to receive satisfactory pay for the use of their money.

The meeting hall overhead contains furniture built by one Jimmy Green, an Alexandrian cabinet maker and furniture builder of a century ago, especially for the veteran organization. Its present appearance speaks exceedingly well for the skilled ability of the craftsmen of that day and time. The care-taker is Mr. Wm. H. Humphries, who for sixty years has stood ready to answer the call of duty when the red demon threatened life and property. Mark R. Norris and the present secretary, Mr. Nancefield are also veterans of some fifty-odd years service.

Mr. Humphries tells some thrilling stories of the old days in Alexandria, including an account of the run of the Friendship company to Washington when the Patent Office burned. He is an amiable host and any one wishing to inspect the historic equipment and interesting curiosities of ye olden time will be cordially entertained by the veteran fire-fighter.

HOME BEAUTIFUL

By DOROTHY ETHEL WALSH.

Old Time Chair Is Rejuvenated by Black Satin and Bright Wool.

A black background gives bright wool embroidery a better chance to show to advantage than one of a neutral shade. That is why black cushions with colored designs worked on them are so effective.

To-day the accompanying sketch shows a chair and stool upholstered with black satin on which orange, rose and blue worsted flowers do much to make their surroundings cheerful.

Quaintly old fashioned is the chair pictured. How many housewives could revitalize some of their discarded articles in such a manner. Chairs that are passe can be made objects of decorative value, if nimble fingers will but fashion them a new dress.

A piece of satin may be bought and on it stamped (in white of course) any one of the many designs to be found in the needlework sections of the stores. In this work the nimble fingers will have an opportunity to play with colors as bright as they desire, for the charm of these designs lies in the brilliance of their hues.

The embroidery is not hard to do. Cross stitch may be employed, or when the design is rather large, as is the one shown to-day, long loose stitches will give the desired effect.

A Call to Prayer for The Armanent Conference

Striking paragraphs from the call to prayer and consecration for the success of the Conference on Limitation of armament issued to 150,000 congregations by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America are:

Let us not shrink from proclaiming unequivocally that war is not a necessity, that the pacific settlement of every international question is possible, that a warless world can really be achieved. Our witness must be unmistakable that force is not the final arbiter among the nations, but that justice, reason and good will can control their life as well as the life of indivdual men. To continue to point to the mailed fist as our ultimate reliance and to carry on a program of mutual distrust and fear, is to undermine the very foundation of our Christian faith.

"Let there be throughout the church a fire of holy indignation not only against war but also against the mad competition in armaments which has nourished suspicon, ill-will and fear, and from which wars have always sprung and always will.

"Let us pray unceasingly that the Spirit of God may guide our leaders assembled at the Conference of the nations, that unselfish motives and wise counsels may prevail. Let us give ourselves unstintedly to cultivating a Christian public opinion so strong that it will make possible the richest results from their deliberations. We cannot be satisfied with a mild curtailment of our military expenditure.

Nothing less than a far reaching reduction in armaments on sea and land, can suffice. It is not for us to dictate the specific plans by which the longed-for goal may be achieved, but insist we must, with all the passion of our souls, that rational and pacific methods must now be found for the settlement of international disputes."

NAPOLEON'S IDEAL WOMAN

The great Napoleon, in response to a question once asked by a lady, replied "My ideal woman is not the beautiful society belle or the butterfly of fashion, but the matron who reaches middle age in complete preservation of health, with stalwart children by her side."

There are a great many women of middle age who owe their good health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that famous medicine for female ills. For almost fifty years this wonderful medicine, compounded of roots and herbs, has been restoring suffering women to health.

HEALTHFUL VIGOR IN STRONG BLOOD

Rich, Red Blood Built Up By Pepto-Mangan—Liquid or Tablet

Blood is strong and full of life-giving vigor when there are plenty of red cells in it. Anaemic people have little strength because there are not enough red cells in the blood. It is thin and watery. Weak blood makes faces pale, pulls down the strength and leaves the body tired, weak, and sickly.

A course in Gude's Pepto-Mangan restores weak blood to its normal strength. Taken regularly for a while it adds red cells to the blood. Then with good blood, the strength and vigor of health return. There is pleasure in living, with good blood running through the veins. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is put up in liquid and in tablet form. They are the same medicinally. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package. Advertisement.

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Pupils to Compete In Safety Campaign

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—Seekto reduce the number of automobile accidents, which take an annual toll of thousands of children's lives, the Highway and Highway Transport Education Committee is announcing a national safety campaign among grammar school pupils and grammar school teachers.

The campaign takes the form of two national essay contests. One is among pupils of the fifth, sixth, seventh grades and the other is among grammar school teachers, who are being invited to prepare lessons teaching children safe behavior on the highways. "How I Can Make the Highways More Safe" is the subject on which children are asked to prepare essays.

Four hundred and fifty state prizes are being offered through the committee by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in the hope that pupils will be stimulated to participate. The prizes have an aggregate value of $5,000, and are distributed among the states on a basis of elementary school enrollment. Teachers are offered three national prizes, the first of which is $500 in cash and a trip to Washington. The second and third prizes are $300 and $200 respectively.

An enthusiastic response from every section of the country has greeted the announcement. State, city and county superintendents of schools are lending the weight of their influence to the campaign and bringing the contents to the attention of the pupils and teachers under their jurisdiction.

Mother's clubs, civic organizations, chambers of commerce, safety councils and other organizations that are interested in the welfare of the children of the country are assisting the committee in the national campaign which will culminate with the observance of "National Safety Week."December 4 to 10. The contests close Saturday, December 10, when all essays and lessons are to be in the hands of the principal of schools. After December 10 the best essays and the best lessons from each community will be chosen by competent committees and then forwarded to the state committee to be designated by the state superintendent of schools, or other influential persons. After the best essays and the best lessons have been chosen for the various states and territorial possessions, the state prizes in the pupils contests will be awarded and the manuscripts receiving state honors will then be forwarded to the committee in Washington.

Arrangements are being made for distinguished educators to read the state essays and the state lessons to choose therefrom the ones entitled to the national honors.

Dr. John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, who is chairman of the Highway and Highway Transport Education Committee, has written the state and city superintendents requesting assistance. In his letter, Dr. Tigert said: "In order to reduce the appalling number of accidents on our streets and highways I wish to call attention to the safety educational program of the Highway Transport Education Committee If not inconsistent with your polices, I trust we may have hearty co-operation."

The committeee, which has offices in the Willard Building, is answering scores of inquiries daily from princpals, teachers and pupils, who have signified their intention of participating in the campaign.

National Conference of Methodist at Detroit

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 2.—The Rev. R. J .Wade, D. D., Corresponding Secretary of the Committee on Conservation and Advance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, Ill., announces a national conference of the church to consider its world wide missionary and benevolent interests to be held in the church house of Central Methodist Church, Detroit, Michigan, November 15, 16 and 17.

Dr. Wade said, "The purpose of the conference is to assemble representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church for 3 days of thanksgiving, prayer, and council, a realzed need and the church's reply. The conference will be held for information, inspiration and deepening of the spiritual life of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is expected that through this conference that America and all the world will hear the solemn voice of a church reiterating its loyal devotion to Jesus Christ as the hope of the world, at a time when the spiritual forces of the world are unaroused."

The conference will review progress of the world program outlined in the centenary period of five years To finance this work Methodists of the United States pledged in the Centenary Campaign $108,000,000 payable in five years. Dr. Morris W. Ehnes, Treasurer, recently reported that over $33,000,000 had been paid in the first two years.

The committee in charge has placed the conference at the same time regular meetings of the board of home missions and church extension, the board of education, the council of boards of benevolence and meetings of the bishops. All seats at the conference will be assigned and reserved.

The following groups are being invited: Bishops, district superintendents, members of the council of boards of benevolence, members and staff of constituent boards, the editors of Methodist papers, five pastors and five laymen from each episcopal area in addition to members of the boards.

The fund for expenses of the conference has been given by men and women as testimony of their devotion and interest.

Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, secretary, Department of Education Committee on Conservation and Advance, Chicago, Illinois, is executive secretary of the convention.

This will be the greatest gathering ever held except the quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Three thousand Methodist leaders from all over the United States are to assemble at this meeting of national and international importance, and at the same time Michigan Methodists will assemble in the church building adjoining, and have the privilege of hearing these national leaders on world-wide problems and their solution.

JEAN DE RESZKE, CARUSO'S PREDECESSOR AT THE METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE, AND MISS MAY PETERSON, AMERICAN SOPRANO

Jean de Reszke, once the leading operatic tenor of the world and now its most famous singing teacher, doesn't like cameramen. He hasn't faced one before for eight years. But May Peterson, favorite concert star, known as "the golden girl of the Metropolitan," seems to have diverted his attention sufficiently for a photographer to slip in and capture Mr. De Reszke in an informal pose with the American prima donna. Miss Peterson spent the entire summer with Mr. De Reszke receiving suggestions and preparing her concert programs for the coming season. This picture was made at Mr. De Reszke's summer home at Royat, in the mountains of France.

THE LILY

(For the Gazette)

Botanical authorities specify nearly eighty species of the true lily.

The earliest varieties of lilies in cultivation were described by Gerard in 1597, who cited only eight which he referred to as "true lilies."

True lilies are herbaceous, with scaly bulbous roots. The term is rather loosely applied, however, and many varieties which are not really liliums but belong to genera which are quite distinct, botanically, are often included.

The lily of the valley is not a true lily, but belongs to a different family known botanically as asparagoideae.

Mythologically the white lily was fabled to have sprung from the milk of Hera. As the plant of purity it was contrasted with the rose of Aphrodite.

The lily is remarkable for its power of resisting the influence of foreign pollen and the seedlings, when crossed generally resemble that which bears them.

The "lilies of the field," referred to in the gospel of Matthew, because of the comparison of their beauty with royal robes, it is thought were the red Syrian lilies.

Lilies are not a conspicuous floral feature in Palestine and the red anemone, with which the hillsides of Galilee are dotted in the spring are considered more likely to have inspired the Scriptural figure of speech.

The white lily of the Greeks was one of the most common garden flowers of antiquity, appearing in Grecian poetry from Homer downwards, side by side with the rose and the violet.

LITTLE STORIES OF THE STREET
By The Man About Town

The editorial appearing in Monday's edition of the Gazette in regard to the teaching of music in the public schools has aroused so much interest and caused so much comment that we deemed it wise to get the personal opinion of each individual member of the School Board regarding the advisability of installing such a course of instruction at an early date. Ten members of the Board, including the president, Dr. S. B. Moore, and the Superintendent of Schools, Mr. W. H. Sweeny have been interviewed by a representative of this paper and they are nearly all in favor of primary musical instruction.

Dr. S. B. Moore, President of the Board, in very concise English expressed his approval of the plan and his hopes that it might be put into effect.

Mr. Gilbert Cox stated that he was personally very much in favor of the plan and would give it his support.

Mr. C. Ashley Bladen is very enthusiastic over the proposition and believes that it should be put through as soon as possible. He commended the editorial policy of the Gazette along school matters and expressed thanks for the cooperation received.

Mr. Charles E. Tennesson expressed his approval of the programme outlined in the editorial but called the reporters attention to the lack of room in the schools at this time which in his opinion might prevent further expansion.

Mr. E. S. Leadbeater is very favorably inclined towards including musical instruction in the schools. It might, Mr. Leadbeater suggested, be substituted for French, or at least the sort of French he learned at school.. Mr. Leadbeater laughingly explained that after he got to France he was unable to find a single Frenchman who could understand French as he had learned it in America. He stated that in his opinion such instruction would be a great help to the church workers of the vicinity, who necessarily, must recruit their choirs from the ranks of the schools.

Mr. C. E. Dare thinks the plan feasible and will give his support.

Mr. R. N. Colvin is very conservative in his views and while in accord with any movement for betterment of the schools would not express an individual opinion for publication.

Dr. S. Lunt would not express an opinion, stating that he had not had time to give the matter serious consideration.

Mr. T. Calvert Perry, while admitting that musical instruction should be given in the schools, would not express himself concerning his attitude in the matter when it came up for action.

Mr. Thomas E. Dyson, expresses doubt that the money can be found available for the purpose at the present time even though he personally believes that rudimentary vocal and musical training should be included in the courses.

Mr. James Bayne, and Dr. L. E. Powell we were unable to reach before the paper went to press.

The Superintendent of Schools. Capt. W. H. Sweeny, states that he would be pleased to see music taught in the schools.

The matter will come before the School Board for discussion at its next meeting on the evening of November 9th and the Gazette will have a representative present to report the action taken at the meeting. Forming an opinion from answers received to our questions in regard to the programme outlined in Monday's editorial it appears that the matter will receive favorable action at the hands of the School Board when it meets.

Alexandria has a first class High School with a progressive principal and a competent staff of teachers. The students are active, intelligent, young Americans of the finest type. The building is a credit to any city of our size. But, and here comes the rub, the streets approaching the school are a disgrace to the community. West street is well nigh impassable for wheeled traffic. The sidewalks are full of holes, where they exist at all. Cameron street where it isn't occupied by the street-car tracks is also practically impassable. There is no parking place for cars anywhere in the vicinity. Something should be done to remedy this condition, and the sooner it is done the better every citizen who has the welfare of the city at heart will be pleased.

The Alexandria Public Library is located on the second floor at 806 Prince Street. Books may be obtained between 2.30 and 4.30 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and between 7 to 9 on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings. A free reading room is maintained which contains the late magazines and periodicals. A shortage of space makes it necessary to limit the volume of matter on the shelves but the books show careful selection and anyone will find much readable matter of interest available. Incidentally The Alexandria Public Library is one of the oldest in America having been founded in 1791. It was closed and the books stored during the Civil War period but was opened to the public after hostilities ceased.

A great many holders of Liberty Bonds have been cashing them in during the past few months. Any time a Liberty Bond isn't worth face value, the money you carry in your jeans has depreciated. They are both promises of the United States Government to pay a stated amount at a given time. Uncle Sam is solvent, and discounting a Liberty Bond is like digging up a potato crop before the tubers have matured.

The racing season at the Laurel track is in full swing and every afternoon a certain number of our, more or less prominent citizens forget the worries of their professions while watching the gallopers dash under the wire. Last week a friend of ours sidetracked his appointments and motored to Laurel. To add interest to the afternoon's sport he placed six iron men on a horse dubbed "The Clansman." As the horses went to the post he glanced casually at his ticket and shoved it in his pocket. The Clansman breezed home in a walk and our friend lined up at the cashier's window to collect his fifty odd dollars. When he felt for his winning ticket, he found that it no longer reposed where he had placed it. He searched his clothes while the crowd waited, but he searched in vain for the ticket had vanished. Doc is a good fellow and he didn't have much to say, but it is certainly tough luck when you pick the good ones and then LOSE.

STATE HIGHWAYS

Richmond, Nov. 1.—The awarding of contracts by Virginia in covering the construction of 324.08 miles of State Highways at a cost of $5,709,709.47 during fiscal year which closed September 30, makes possible State Highway construction work in fifty-seven counties of the States to the amount of $1,051,000 additional which will take place as soon as contests as to location and rights of way have been settled, will affect nine counties, while fifteen resurfacing projects costing $232,876.12, have been carried on by State forces in fourteen counties in which no new construction projects have been initiated this year. With the construction work on State Highways started in 1920 and carried forward into 1921, almost every county in the State has participated in the expenditures for State Highway construction during the present year, in addition to the funds distributed to the counties under the State aid act.

Notwithstanding the fact that highway construction has been started all over the State, the Highway Department has laid out the vrious projects and awarded the contracts with the view of connecting up the main travelled thoroughfares of the State for all year round travel, according to State Highway Commissioner Coleman. Owing to the fact that practically every State Highway between important centers has numerous gaps of unimproved road which were impassable under favorable weather conditons, it has been impossible to pick up all these gaps in one year. Law suits about locations, possible change in routings by the next General Assembly and other unforeseen difficulties have prevented carrying forward the opening up of the State Highways between important cities to the extent desired by the Highway Department this year. However, the completion of work let to contract during 1921 will link up many cities and towns which heretofore have been accessible only by train in wet weather.

The average length of the contracts awarded by the State Highway Department was five miles. It is admitted by the Highway Commission that this average is too low and that it is difficult to get many large contractors to bid on contracts this small. As Virgina is still operating on a cash basis depending on current road revenues for money with which to build State Highways, the State Highway Commission felt that it would be unfair to the majority of the counties of the State if the limited funds were concentrated on one or two main highways, knowing that continuation of the present financial plan would mean that some of the mileage of the State Highway System could not be reached for eighteen years. Virginia was able to do sixty per cent more road construction in 1921 than she was able to do in the combined years of 1919 and 1920, due to the accumulation of funds from the preceding years. The funds in sight for 1922 are only about half of the money available for 1921.

That the average length of the contracts let to date in North Carolina was 8.67 is due ot the large contracts which the Highway Department of North Carolina has been able to award since the passge of the $50,000,000 bond measure in that State. Prior to the passage of, this measure, the mileage of each contract was approximately that of Virginia. It is highly probable that the average length of contracts let in North Carolina will be materially increased by spring of 1922 as the State Highway Department of North Carolina has found from its recent experiences that the awarding of large contracts attracts strong competition among the biggest road building organizations in the country, insuring the lowest price obtainable in additon to the saving in time and overhead by reason of the ability of large contractors to complete the work more rapidly.
